Reading:

Llamas are fascinating animals that belong to the camel family. They have long, shaggy coats that come in various colors like white, brown, and black. Llamas are native to South America, particularly the Andes Mountains, where they are often used as pack animals to carry heavy loads. One interesting fact about llamas is that they are very social creatures and often live in herds. They have long, banana-shaped ears that can swivel independently, helping them to hear predators. Llamas are herbivores, which means they only eat plants like grasses and hay. They have soft, padded feet with two toes, which make them great climbers in the rocky terrain of their mountainous homes. Llamas are known for their gentle nature and are often used as therapy animals to help people feel calm and happy.
